1 THE VAL D'ARAN

The Val d'Aran has its own distinctive personality. This high mountain territory is the only valley in the Catalan Pyrenees with an Atlantic climate. Its exceptional location, former links with Occitania, and century-old isolation during the winter months have left this small area with its own language (Aranese), officially recognised throughout Catalonia, and deep-rooted traditions originating in what is now the south of France. With impressive landscapes, glacial lakes, and peaks over 3000 metres high, the Val d'Aran is an ideal destination for skiing and adventure sports; Baqueira Beret resort is considered to have the best winter sports infrastructure in the whole of the Iberian Peninsula. The rich artistic and cultural heritage and the unique gastronomy complete the attractions of this mountain territory.

VALL DE BOÍ ROMANESQUE ENSEMBLE

The Vall de Boí Romanesque ensemble was listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2000. The hermitage and eight churches were all built during the 11th and 12th centuries, and conserve the original Lombard Romanesque style developed in northern Italy and characterised by functional construction techniques, meticulous stonework, slim bell towers, and decorative finishes on the exterior and interior. The Vall de Boí Romanesque ensemble is exceptional for its concentration of so many churches in such a small area, and for the unity and authenticity of their architectural style, which has undergone few modifications over the centuries.

FIRE FESTIVALS

Listed as a UNESCO Masterpiece of the Oral and Intangible Heritage of Humanity in 2015, fire festivals are held in 63 villages (34 French, 17 Catalan, 9 Aragonese and 3 Andorran) in celebration of the summer and winter solstices.

They involve carrying falles (lit torches) from the mountain tops down to the village squares. The routes begin from a place high up on the mountain, which can be seen from the villages. There, a pine tree – called a faro – has been planted, which is used to light the torches. The participants then carry the torches down the mountain behind the leader – called the fadrí major or cap de colla.

When the flames arrive in the village, the bells begin to toll and the torch carriers are welcomed with traditional music and dancing.

In Val d'Aran, this festival – which is held on Saint John's Eve – has its own particular format.

WHITE-WATER RAFTING ON THE RIVER NOGUERA PALLARESA

Located in the heart of the Pyrenees, the Noguera Pallaresa is considered one of the best and most emblematic rivers in Europe for white-water rafting and other related sports. The river has 60 km of navigable waters all year round, with stretches offering different levels of complexity, of which the most challenging appear during the peak snowmelt months of May and June.

This long navigable river offers something for everyone, ranging from adrenaline-laden thrills of furious rapids to peaceful rides through enchanting surroundings. The numerous companies operating in the area provide different options for enjoying this type of adventure activity in safety.

MONT-REBEI CANYON

Mont-rebei is the only large-scale canyon in Catalonia that is still largely unspoiled, uninterrupted by roads, railways or electricity cables.

The canyon is formed by the River Noguera Ribagorçana on its course through Montsec Mountains, and can only be traversed by a bridle path partially carved out of the rock, affording spectacular views. A large number of hiking and kayak options are available.

The canyon walls have vertical drops of over 500 metres, and minimum widths of a mere 20 metres. The ecological interest includes native fauna (especially birds of prey), rich vegetation, and the beauty of a rugged landscape. Most of the canyon is in Montsec Natural Space.

LA SEU D'URGELL CATHEDRAL

The Cathedral of Santa Maria we see today in La Seu d'Urgell is the fourth place of worship built on the same site, over the original Visigoth cathedral, a 9th-century replacement, and the Cathedral of Saint Ermengol. The monumentality and architectural austerity (except for some sculptural profusion in the cloisters and on the west façade) of this Romanesque cathedral, the only one of its kind in Catalonia, make it the main exponent of the apogee of Catalan Romanesque. The temple shows influences from Occitania and northern Italy, and later exerted its own influence on several nearby buildings, notably the church of Santa Maria de Covet in the neighbouring Pallars Sobirà County.

SOLSONA CARNIVAL

Solsona carnival is listed as a Festival of National Tourist Interest for its outstanding degree of originality. It starts on the last Thursday before Lent and ends on Ash Wednesday.

Typical carnival events are organised on these days, together with burlesque traditions from other seasons of the year, such as replicas of the town's "giants", the figure of an ass hanging from the bell tower, a mock "sermon", soapbox races, a fun market, and any number of local practical jokes. Traditional carnival fancy dress has been replaced in Solsona by the colourful smocks of the participant groups and by the "mad giants" dancing to the beat of the carnival anthem.

La Patum is one of the most popular festivals in Catalonia, attracting visitors from all over the country who flock to Berga every year to see the spectacle. The event takes place over five days at Corpus Christi (a moveable feast falling in May or June).

THE PHARMACY OF LLÍVIA

Llívia is a curious place: a Catalan enclave in French territory, an island of Catalonia within France. The town is surrounded by woods, lakes, and meadows that invite you to come and have a look, stroll around, breathe in the fresh air, and enjoy the natural environment.

The pharmacy of Llívia, documented since 1594, is considered the oldest in Europe.

In the early 17th century, it was taken over by the Esteva family, who ran it for seven generations until the last pharmacist closed it down in 1926. Diputació de Girona acquired the building in 1965 under the agreement that it would remain in Llívia. The museum houses a collection of archaeological material pertaining to the history of the town.

VALL DE NÚRIA

Vall de Núria is a protected space located at an altitude of 2000 metres, accessible either by foot or by a rack railway train affording passengers an opportunity to admire the exceptional beauty of the Pyrenean landscape.

The valley is surrounded by peaks of some 3000 metres high, a huge amphitheatre of peace and quiet flanked by gentle mountain slopes. Of notable interest are the sanctuary of the Virgin of Núria, an important centre for Catalan traditions and religious life, and the ski resort bearing the same name.

The wide range of sports available in the area makes Vall de Núria an ideal base camp for everybody who likes spending time outdoors.

VOLCANOES IN LA GARROTXA

Garrotxa Volcanic Area, listed as a Natural Park, includes some forty volcanic cones and over twenty lava-flows, and is the best example of a volcanic landscape in the Iberian Peninsula. The climate, the soil type, and the shape of the land combine to give a varied, often exuberant, vegetation of exceptional beauty.

Many parts of the Garrotxa Volcanic Area Natural Park can be visited on foot all year round, and the volcanoes can be climbed without much difficulty.

Santa Margarida and El Croscat volcanoes should not be missed. Other ways of seeing the park include biking along designated cycle tracks or taking a hot air balloon trip affording an unusual view of the best-conserved volcanic landscape in the Iberian Peninsula.

14 JEWISH BATHHOUSE IN BESALÚ

The medieval historic-artistic site of Besalú is considered one of the best conserved in Catalonia.

Of exceptional interest is the Jewish Quarter with its mikveh, for a long time the only medieval Jewish bathhouse known in Spain, until another was discovered in Girona city in 2014. The Besalú mikveh is one of four of its kind remaining in Europe.

The mikveh is housed in a barrel-vaulted underground room built from carved stone in the Romanesque style. The bath was filled with naturally flowing spring water, and was used to purify the soul through complete immersion of the body.

The bathhouse is located on the site of the former synagogue of Besalú, now listed as a Cultural Asset of National Interest.

Other interesting parts of this unique synagogue enclosure are the courtyard, which was used for weddings and festivities, and the prayer room.

SALVADOR DALÍ THEATRE-MUSEUM

The Salvador Dalí Theatre-Museum in Figueres, where Dalí chose to create his museum, is considered the largest surrealist “object” in the world. Paintings, drawings, engravings, sculptures, installations, jewellery, photographs, holograms, stereoscopic images, etc. make up the permanent collection spanning his artistic career from the earliest to the later works, running through futurism, impressionism and, of course, surrealism.

The museum also houses works from Dalí’s own private collection.

Other spaces containing works by the great master of surrealism include the Salvador Dalí Museum-House in Portlligat, Dalí’s only fixed abode where he lived and worked on a regular basis; the Gala Dalí Castle Museum-House in Púbol; and the Dalí-Jewels space in Figueres.

capitals. Also notable are the defence tower, the bell tower, the two cloisters, and the vestiges of pictorial decoration on the walls.
